

Randy Starks' charges reduced to traffic offense

Randy Starks' charges reduced to traffic offense

by Aaron Wilson

APRIL 09, 02010

Miami Dolphins defensive lineman Randy Starks' court case was resolved favorably today.

Starks' case was reduced to a traffic offense, adjudicated down from a previous misdemeanor charge of culpable negligence, according to the South Florida Sun-Sentinel.

Now, the former Tennessee Titans and University of Maryland player will only have to pay a $219 fine and attend eight hours of traffic school.

Starks was initially facing a felony aggravated assault case that was subsequently dropped.